National Unemployment Insurance Given as Substitute to Cash Payment

VETERAN FAVORS IT

Only 13 Per Cent Of Unemployed Are War Veterans Is Reported

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—National unemployment insurance was offered Tuesday by Representative LaGuardia, New York Republican, as a counter proposal to the cash payment of the two billion dollar soldier bonus.

LaGuardia, himself a war veteran, testified before the House Ways and Means Committee, as the bonus opponents began their testimony Tuesday morning at the capitol.

LaGuardia argued that only 13 per cent of the unemployed were war veterans and that the payment of the bonus would relieve only a small percentage of the unemployed and destitute of the land.

State Eleventh In Improved Mileage

Arkansas Ranks Twenty-third in Total of Concrete Highways

Arkansas ranked eleventh among the states in total mileage of improved roads as of January 1, 1932, it is shown in a tabulation of various types of state highways, published in the current issue of American Highways, official publication of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

Arkansas' total mileage of public roads was given as 68,840, and only 18 states were shown to have a higher mileage of public roads.

The mileage on the state system was given as 8,902 of which 8,206 miles have been improved in some form. States listed as having a greater mileage of improved roads were: Colorado, 9,009; Illinois, 11,550, which included the entire state system; Louisiana, 12,247; Missouri, 8,229; New York, 12,086 (entire state system); North Carolina, 9,773; Ohio, 11,748; Pennsylvania, 12,562 (entire state system); Texas, 18,546; Wisconsin, 10,218.

Mileage of road by types in Arkansas was listed as follows: Graded and drained, 797; untreated gravel, 5,423; 208; bituminous mix (asphaltic), 298; bituminous concrete, 608; Portland cement concrete, 901; other types, 176. Of the total 1,910 miles were improved with federal aid funds and 5,206 miles were improved without federal funds.

Arkansas ranked twenty-third in mileage of Portland cement concrete pavement; sixth in bituminous concrete; nineteenth in low cost bituminous mix, and second in mileage of untreated gravel roads. Louisiana, with 8,753 miles of gravel roads, is the only state having a larger mileage of that type than Arkansas. Louisiana was listed as having 1,877 miles of Portland cement concrete paving.

Arkansas was shown to have completed last year 104 bridges of more than 20 feet in length. Kentucky built the same number of such bridges and 12 states built a greater number.

Lynching Feared In Assault Case

Star City Youth Hurried Out of Town to Prevent Violence

STAR CITY—Bud Davis, aged 19, son of a well known Star City merchant, is held in the Jefferson county jail at Pine Bluff on a charge of having assaulted a 15-year-old Star City girl Friday afternoon.

Officers who arrested the youth early Monday rushed him to Pine Bluff, fearing mob violence. Feeling toward young Davis is said to be intense. Efforts by residents of the community to locate the youth had been unavailing, officers declined to make public their destination when they left here with him.

The father of the victim of the attack conferred with E. W. Brockman of Pine Bluff, prosecuting attorney of the Eleventh Judicial Circuit, and two charges were preferred against young Davis, one alleging a capital offense.

The father told Mr. Brockman that he wanted the law to take its course, and that he hoped all possible precautions would be taken against mob violence.

The girl was reported Monday night to be in a serious condition. The attack occurred at a picnic near Star City.

Philadelphia Lads Foil Kidnapers

Kidnapers didn't fare so well when they tried to abduct Thomas Walsh, 12 (right), and his brother Edward, 14 (center), in Philadelphia the other day. Thomas tore himself away from three men who sought to pull him into an automobile, and Edward, though seized and imprisoned in a barn, managed to escape through an unbarred window while his kidnapers were away. Here the two boys are shown, safe again, with their mother and father and Francis Clerkin, 12 (left), who was with the brothers when the kidnaping attempt was made.

Arkansas Youths Held As Robbers

Two Alleged to Have Confessed Fort Smith Post-office Looting

JEFFERSON CITY Mo.—(AP)—Capt. Lewis Means of the State Highway Patrol announced Monday that Lloyd Hord and Earl Holder, under arrest at Booneville, Mo., had confessed they robbed the postoffice at Fort Smith, Ark., last Monday night and a drug store at Joplin, Mo., last Tuesday.

Captain Means said Hord, who says he is the son of a Little Rock, (Ark.) cement manufacturer, and Holder, also of Little Rock, had denied any knowledge of the disappearance of John C. Powell, 31, Windsor, (Mo.) business man, whose blood-spattered automobile was found in Kansas City Friday. Hord and Holder, each 18, will be questioned further regarding the Powell case.

Two inspectors from Arkansas are in Booneville, but they probably will not return Hord and Holder until Missouri officers complete questioning them regarding Powell's disappearance.

Because of their apparent anxiousness to return to Fort Smith or to face a charge of automobile theft in Kansas City, Captain Means said, he believed Hord and Holder were "trying to hide something."

Powell is believed to have had approximately $1,800 when he left Springfield, Mo., for his home in Windsor. Hours later, his blood-stained automobile was found in Kansas City.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Several thousand steel workers were back at work Monday in the mills of Birmingham, Pittsburgh and Youngstown, Ohio, as staple prices and an increase in orders gave encouragement to the steel industry.

In Pittsburgh employers said wages probably would be maintained at their present level. Here and at Youngstown more mills plan to resume operations later in the week.

MEMPHIS.—(AP)—A jury to try Herbert Scales, Dallas polo player, and Ralph Arnold, filling station operator for participation in a $25,000 robbery of the Union Bankers National Bank and Trust Company last May 4, was completed at noon Tuesday.

Smith escaped arrest from jail later when he fled from Shawnee policeman, A. L. Blackwell, who well sought to capture the suspect, a warehouse where he often loitered. Tecumseh citizens were later told of Butler's death. He was one of the most popular officers in the town and had served as sheriff from 1921 until 1925.

Officers refused to divulge where they had taken Smith.

They admitted, however, that the action was prompted by the fact that threats had been made openly to lynch Smith.

Claude Ark, alleged friend of Smith was arrested at the warehouse.

Blackwell was standing guard at the warehouse when he saw Smith approach.

"Stop, Smith," the officer called. He leveled his double-barreled shotgun at the youth.

Smith tackled the officer and they fell on the ground grappling with each other. The weapon was discharged twice in the fray.

Smith then fled as Blackwell supplied his automatic revolver. None of the bullets took effect.

Smith was arrested later by groups of officers who searched the country side and blocked highways against his escape.

THE 1932 YEAR BOOK OUR HISTORY OF 1931

In many lines of industry the largest companies reduced their output in 1931. Those who furnished them with raw materials had, at best, restricted markets.

Swift & Company's 1932 Year Book, now ready, tells how this nation-wide, diversified marketing organization met conditions in a better way.

1. It kept its doors open and handled more pounds of products than in 1930.
2. It continued to pay cash for all it bought.
3. In more than a hundred produce stations it held to the policy of purchasing all the poultry, eggs and dairy products offered by farmers.
4. Still more important, Swift & Company cut its own costs.

Thirty years of experience have proved that the most economical way to market produce is through the same channels that handle meats. The same salesmen sell, the same refrigerator cars transport, the same branch houses sell and deliver the whole Swift & Company line of fine foods, such as Swift's Premium Ham and Bacon, Swift's Premium Milk, Fed Chicken, Golden West Fowl, Swift's Brookfield Butter, Eggs, Cheese and many other products.

Read the 1932 Year Book. It explains how a rounded line makes Swift & Company operations stable and how diversification lessens the costs of handling both meat and produce. It takes the mystery out of the factors that go to make price levels. And it tells in detail the steps this Company has taken to make itself still more efficient in covering the gap between hundreds of thousands of producers and millions of consumers.

CHAPTER XVIII

"I'm afraid you'll have to work overtime tonight, Miss Carey."

That was Mr. Heath's cool, matter-of-fact, well-bred voice. "Can you telephone your family? It won't be long, only until about nine, but I must get this Weatherhill business finished."

"I'll call my aunt," Susan said.

"Good girl," he approved.

Meeting Ray in the wash room a little later, Susan mentioned that she would be working late. Ray's round, interested eyes unwinkingly surveyed her.

"Ooh, you've made it up with Jack then?"

Susan flushed at the implication.

"I'm working for Mr. Heath," she said with dignity. Ray applied a touch of mascara and stood back to judge the effect.

"That skink!" she disposed of Ernest Heath summarily.

"He's not!" said Susan indignantly. "He's very nice."

"Yeh, I know," Ray scoffed. "He has a castle on the north shore and a lotta polo ponies and all that stuff and he thinks people who work for him are made of iron or something. Betcha he didn't ask you if you had a date, even," surmised Ray shrewdly.

"He's the kind that thinks a girl goes straight home and says her prayers every night. That is, if she doesn't happen to belong to his set or whatever they call it. Whew! The way some of these rich babies live!"

Ray now could fire half a dozen shots a minute without haste. On the heels of this came the machine gun, spitting out bullets at a rate better than one a second, and the defense became almost infinitely superior to offense.

Next came the breech-loading, repeating rifle. The infantry now could fire half a dozen shots a minute without haste. On the heels of this came the machine gun, spitting out bullets at a rate better than one a second, and the defense became almost infinitely superior to offense.

Ray of is nobody's business. From what I hear, his own wife and stepson are here."

Susan's curiosity was piqued, although the conversation offended her. "What do you know about that?" she asked in a tone calculated to nettles Ray.

"Ray laughed. 'Oh, I get around,' he said mysteriously. 'I hear things.'"

The entrance of a spectacled and superior secretary from down the hall added this colloquy and Susan returned to the office.

In the inner room Mr. Heath worked over his blueprints. He was so impersonal, a figure that Susan was scarcely conscious of his presence. The back of her neck began to ache and she realized suddenly that she was ravenously hungry. She looked at the clock. It was a quarter past seven. "Barley, he doesn't expect me to work all evening without dinner," she thought indignantly. "Why, the man's inhuman!" She rested her head on one hand for an instant and it was at that very moment her employer looked up.

Shaken out of his absorption, Heath noticed the pathos of the weary young figure.

"Good Lord, I completely forgot about food!" he muttered to himself. "Miss Carey, look here!"

Susan sat up and shook the mists out of her eyes.

"I'm sorry, I was just resting. I got so fearfully tired," she murmured, confusedly.

"The man came and stood beside her desk, his lean, dark face expressing his concern. "I completely forgot you'd had no dinner," he said. "What shall we do about it? You must be worn out, poor child!"

His tone was half-murmurous, half-caressing. Susan seemed to him at the moment indeed the merest child.

"Let's see," he was thinking aloud. "There's a place across the street that does very well for lunch, a sort of grill room. Suppose I ring them up and have something sent over? It will only take a few minutes. How would you like a club sandwich and milk-tea-ginger ale, anything?" His tone was decidedly jovial.

"I'm so terribly hungry," Susan confessed with a little laugh, "that anything at all would be just heavenly."

"That's that, then," announced Mr. Heath firmly, reaching for a phone. "Struck by another inspiration, he waved. 'I only as I should have a bit myself,' he said with the air of a man settling a momentary question."

"Look here, let the rest of that go, until you've had food. You're half-dazed with fatigue now, and I don't want any mistakes in those figures."

Susan complied, willing enough to enjoy the reprieve. The man shifted some papers aside and sent himself on the edge of her desk.

"There's something I've been wanting to speak to you about now, Miss Carey," he said, dropping his bantering tone for a more serious one. "Miss O'Connell isn't coming back. She doesn't feel too fit and it appears she has some Florida land and proposes to go down there to live. I only learned this yesterday. The interpolated. 'What I wanted to know is, do you think you could carry on alone? It will mean a raise in salary and more responsibility. You seem rather young for the job but if I may say so we like your work and think well of you. What do you say?'"

"I—I'm delighted," fluttered Susan. "I'll do my best and hope you'll be satisfied with me."

"Good!" He smiled at her.

"Why, he's really awfully nice," thought Susan. "That stiffness and coldness I used to be afraid of probably mean he's terribly shy."

"Where do you live?" Heath asked abruptly. She told him. Briefly she sketched in her life with Aunt Jessie in the little house.

"Rather dull, eh? But you don't mind that?" The shrewd eyes twinkled at her behind the nose glasses.

"It is dull," Susan confessed, "and I do mind sometimes awfully. What further revelation she might have yielded up are impossible to say for at that moment an aproned waiter arrived staggering under the weight of a heavy tray."

"In here!" Mr. Heath directed, leading the way to his private office. "We may as well eat in comfort. The waiter's impressive face gave no sign of the thoughts behind it. If he considered it unusual for employer and secretary to lunch together in private he concealed it."

Mr. Heath tossed over the tray. There, that was Susan's. Was it all right? He was hungry himself. He had only had a bite at the club at noon. Susan who had expected to find the tete-a-tete faintly embarrassing was pleasantly surprised. Ernest Heath was an entertaining

Snake Hunt Near Here Successful

Curator and Assistant From St. Louis Seek Data for Report

LITTLE ROCK—Martin Perkins, curator of reptiles for Forest Park zoo, St. Louis, and M. J. R. Lentz, assistant curator, arrived in Little Rock Sunday night to spend a few days in the area, and to obtain data from which they will prepare a scientific report on the existence of the Texas diamond-back rattlesnake in this state. The two are on the annual spring field trip to renew snake supplies at the zoo's reptile house, and decided to return to Arkansas, where several years ago they caught more than 100 snakes. Last year they spent several weeks in Central America.

The reptile and small mammal house at Forest Park zoo, built of tile and marble, cost $200,000, and is said to be one of the finest in the world. This building has been completed only a few years, and contains almost every variety of snake known.

Lentz formerly lived at Piggott, and is a graduate of Hendrix College, Conway. His wife was Miss Lois Pugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Pugh, Little Rock.

The snake hunters made their first field trip Monday, accompanied by W. R. Spratt, curator of the Municipal zoo, and a Gazette reporter, and caught 12 snakes, seven of which were diamond-back rattlesnakes. Five were from five to six feet long. The party obtained two copperheads, a coach whip, a king snake and a chicken snake.

Not Found Farther North

"It has never been officially reported," Perkins said, "that the Texas diamond-back rattlesnake is found in Arkansas. The first knowledge the scientific world had of this fact was last year, when Lentz on a trip here, obtained an Arkansas diamond-back and sent it to herpetologists in the East. It is our purpose to obtain specimens and as much knowledge as possible about the existence of the diamond-back in Arkansas."

Charging that her husband was taken away from her so he could "keep his mind on his business," Mrs. Virginia McElvain of Chicago, shown above, is suing her millionaire father-in-law, James M. McElvain, Illinois and Texas coal and oil operator, for $100,000. The senior McElvain, according to Mrs. McElvain's suit, influenced her husband, Thornton, to leave her for the management of family properties without marital interference.

Georgia Seeks to Make All Sports Pay Upkeep

ATHENS, Ga.—Efforts are being made at the university of Georgia to put all sports on a self-supporting basis.

H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics, is behind the move, and has announced that track, baseball and basketball are to be made pay their own way, but that golf and probably tennis will continue to be parasites on the general fund.

Football has been a big money maker at Georgia, but some of the other sports have not been so successful in pouring dollars into the Red and Black treasury.

mond-backs in Arkansas, and we shall prepare an official report for publication in scientific journals, after we return to St. Louis. It is extremely important in the study of snakes to know as nearly as possible the boundaries of the area in which the varieties are found. This is as far north and east as the Texas diamond-back has been found."

The Texas diamond-back, Lentz said, is slightly smaller and is lighter in color than that of Florida.

In snake hunting, the hunter walks everywhere one would not walk in a pleasure trip through the woods. Rock piles, cliffs, swamps, old logs and thickets are searched carefully, and the capture of a snake provides an exciting moment. Lentz and Perkins use a stick with a steel hook on one end. They place the bottom of the hook on top of the snake's head, grasp the reptile by the back of the neck and drop it in a sack. Nonpoisonous snakes are grasped with the hands, "catch as can," for the snakes usually are moving swiftly toward a hiding place.

Three of the largest diamond-back snakes were found together Monday, and the herding of the reptiles together, the dodging of their attempts to strike, the pinning of their heads against rocks and the placing of the captives in sacks occupied the entire time and attention of the four members of the party for about five minutes. The expedition was into the hills about seven miles northwest of Ferrisdale.

FROM Smyrna and Samsoun... the finest Turkish tobaccos travel 4,000 miles to add flavor and fragrance to CHESTERFIELD.

for better taste

CIGARETTE smokers owe a lot to Turkish tobacco, for it was cigarettes made out of Turkish tobacco that first became the vogue in this country.

Then it was found that a blend of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos was better than either kind of tobacco straight. It takes just the right amount of the right kind of Turkish tobacco to give a cigarette better taste. For Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what seasoning is to food—the spice—the sauce. You want enough but not too much.

There is just enough Turkish in CHESTERFIELDS to give them a better flavor, a more pleasing aroma; to make them taste better.

Turkish tobacco must pay an import duty of 35c a pound; but cost doesn't count when it comes to making CHESTERFIELD the best cigarette that science and money can produce.
